As a result, human health is greatly threatened. Pollution has made life difficult in big cities. Today it has become very important for us to protect the environment. If the environment is not protected, the question of its existence will arise before the human being. Human beings need to try for this from now on. Plantation is a very important factor in environmental protection. If everyone plants at least one tree and grows it, it will help a lot in environment protection. A one day special lecture was organized on the subject Social Media and Woman Empowerment dated on 08/01/2022 in Pravara Rural College of Education, Pravaranagar. The speaker of this lecture is Mr. Santosh Gujar guided as follows. Women's leadership in social networks can tear down old stereotypes and demographic categories, generating a real impact on media, advertisement and entertainment. Since the 1990s, India has had fast expansion in the ICT sector, which has expanded since 2000. According to a Google research released in June 2013, more than 60 million women in India use the Internet to manage their daily lives, out of a total of 150 million Internet users. The development of social media technologies created various opportunities for the civic population to plead their opinions for the movements which needed much response that couldn't be bought out by the mainstream media. It serves a platform to share, raise the voice of women when their voices are restricted. Thousands of men have joined cyber-hands to help women, share their voices in each and every protest. The subject for empowering women has to be put on light. Empowerment is necessary to make a bright future of the family, society and country, to make their own decisions for their personal dependent. This paper tends to draw out how social media can effectively broaden the scope for action on women's rights and gender equality.
